Introduction

In the coming months, we will be studying six New Testament epistles by two apostles, Paul and John. These epistles are among the last of the New Testament writings. Paul wrote two epistles to Timothy and one to Titus. John wrote the first of his three epistles to an unnamed person or church, the second to a lady known only as “the elect lady,” and the third to a man named Gaius. While each letter is unique and can be profitably studied by itself, there does seem to be a common emphasis expressed by the writers. The theme is expressed in the title to our study: “Preaching and Practicing the Truth.”

One thing shared by these two writers is the time of life in which they wrote. Paul told Timothy in his second letter that he knew he was close to the end of his earthly sojourn. The time of his departure was “at hand.” From historical references within the letters, we know that his other two epistles were written in the same general time frame after the end of the history recorded in the book of the Acts of the Apostles.

While we do not have specific historical references in John's epistles, the consensus among Bible scholars is that John also wrote late in his years. He may well have been in his 90's. Therefore, in a real sense, we have the “last words” of these two godly apostles. Here, they tell us what they found to be important after years of faithful ministry and devotion to the Lord Jesus. These are the mature conclusions of men who learned directly from the Lord Jesus and then, for many years, faithfully preached and practiced that truth. Not surprisingly, they exhorted the recipients of these letters to be diligent in studying the truth, to be zealous in preaching the Word, and to be faithful in practicing it.

Paul wrote to younger men in the ministry. He especially emphasized the duty of these pastors to faithfully minister the Word. His concern for sound doctrine was not academic or theoretical. The people of God are to “adorn the doctrine of God” by purity of life. There is great gain in godliness. The duty of the minister is to facilitate this objective. The Word of God is the only instrument by which the people of God are perfected. Therefore, Timothy and Titus must preach and teach with great diligence.

John was also concerned about the purity of the saints' conduct. He approached this subject by considering what it meant to share the life of a God Who is light, righteousness and love. His conclusion was that it was imperative for those in fellowship with the Father to walk as the Son walked. The saints must walk in light, in righteousness and in love. He further said that if there is no similarity with the life of Jesus Christ, then there must be no relationship either. The practice of God's truth is the necessary proof that we are the children of God. Implicit in this argument is the need to know the truth. It all hinges upon a true knowledge of God.

There remains an essential link between preaching and practicing God's truth.

God's people must seriously consider the words of these faithful apostles. There remains an essential link between preaching and practicing God's truth. Neither will occur without the other. Therefore, if we would be holy practitioners of the Word, we must be diligent to study the Word and careful to attend the preaching of the Word. It is the Word, proclaimed and taught, which, by the Holy Spirit, will be used to perfect the saints. The task of doing these things is what Paul meant when he spoke of “the good fight of faith.” This good fight can only be waged by those who are born by the Spirit of God and is the distinguishing mark of all those who are in fellowship with God the Father and His Son Jesus Christ.

May God grant that as we study these epistles of Paul and John, we will find ourselves increasingly devoted to preaching and practicing the truth.

PURPOSE: Paul, the chief of all sinners, had obtained everlasting life by the grace and mercy of God. The truth of this salvation was then committed to Paul's trust as a faithful minister. He must turn away from the evil of the day and also from those who would have a form of godliness that lacked truth. Paul had found the Lord faithful in his own afflictions and persecutions. 1 John 5

MEMORY: Review

HYMN: "Savior, teach me, day by day"

PURPOSE: John wanted those who believe in Jesus Christ to be certain of eternal life. Eternal life is a gift of God. It is manifested by faith in Him and by obedience to His commands. Therefore, John can say that those who believe in Jesus Christ and do not continue in sin have been born of God. They have the life of Christ in them. It is faith in Jesus Christ and obedience to His commands, both produced by the Triune God, that give us assurance of eternal life.

1. Who believes that Jesus is the Christ?
2. What did John say was true about those who love God?
3. How do we have victory in the world?
4. What are the three witnesses in heaven?
5. What did John say about those who do not believe in the Son of God?
